

Chartridge girls raise over £700 for Cancer Research

Six 'Chartridge Chesty Cherubs' took part in the Race for Life Aylesbury 2012 and raised over £700 which will go to Cancer Research UK. The event was held at Waddesdon Manor at the weekend and was organised by the national charity.

The six ladies who work at Chartridge Conference Centre near Chesham were delighted to complete the 5 kilometre course in 50 minutes. "I am surrounded at the moment with loved ones with the dreaded 'C' so it seemed the very least I could do to help. Cancer Research does so much to help those suffering from the disease and we wanted to do our bit to support them." commented Sam McKenna.

Sam, Rebecca Jenkins, Cris Merton, Lisa Booth, Lynn Barrett and Jo Cato were joined by over 2000 other keen supporters of all shapes, sizes and levels of fitness who endured the rain and wind as well as the uphill slopes and were successful in completing the course

Sam added , "The weather wasn't very kind, but the atmosphere amongst all the ladies taking part was really great so we were spurred on by their enthusiasm, but we've all agreed that next year a little more training wouldn't go amiss!. It's a really worthwhile cause, and one of the best things I've ever done"
